大問4 英文要約 模範解答（49語）

Mobile science laboratories bring equipment and trained instructors to schools that lack proper facilities. They help students conduct experiments and may increase interest in science without requiring schools to buy expensive tools. However, the vehicles cost a lot to maintain, cannot visit many schools, and offer limited working space.

大問5 意見英作文 模範解答（90語）

I think local governments should keep some printed notices even if they use more digital ones. First, not everyone can easily read information online. Older residents and people without reliable Internet access might miss important announcements about disasters or public services. Printed notices at community centers would help them stay informed. Second, digital notices can reduce paper use and printing costs, so they are still valuable for routine updates. For these reasons, local governments should use digital messages as their main method while continuing to provide printed information when necessary.
