英文要約 模範解答

Community groups organize bicycle repair workshops where volunteers teach residents to fix minor problems. These events can save money, encourage cycling, and help neighbors share practical knowledge. However, organizers need experienced volunteers and must identify repairs that are too difficult or unsafe for short sessions, directing owners to professionals when necessary.

英作文 模範解答

I think communities should provide more free workshops for practical skills. First, they can help families save money. For instance, someone who learns basic bicycle maintenance may avoid paying for small repairs. Second, workshops give people opportunities to meet neighbors and learn from experienced volunteers. Such activities may make a community more connected. However, instructors must explain safety rules clearly, especially when participants use tools or electrical equipment. Communities should begin with simple activities and invite qualified helpers. In my opinion, the educational and social benefits make these workshops worth supporting.
