大問4 英文要約 模範解答

Rooftop gardens add plants to crowded cities without requiring new land. They can improve the appearance of public buildings, teach residents about growing food, and reduce heat reaching roofs. However, not all roofs can support heavy soil, and organizers must ensure safe access and regular maintenance before creating these gardens.

大問5 意見英作文 模範解答

I think local museums should offer free admission to all students. First, museums help young people understand history and science through real objects, which can make school lessons more interesting. Students whose families cannot afford admission fees would have the same chance to visit. Second, free entry could encourage students to bring friends or return for special programs, strengthening their connection with the community. Museums still need money for staff and exhibitions, so local governments could provide limited support. For these reasons, I believe free student admission would be a valuable investment.
